College/University	Location	Reflection
 	San Francisco, CA Urban Area 1600 Holloway Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94132	My mother (who is also a teacher) went to college here. I love the location and have family in the area. They have a study abroad program. I will need to take one year of a college prep course, and receive above a C-. I will also need to receive above a C- in 2 years of a History/Social Sciences class (1 year of U.S. government or history), 4 years of English (composition and literature), 3 years of mathematics (Algebra, geometry, intermediate algebra; or integrated mathematics), 2 years of Laboratory Science (3 years recommended - One year of biological and one year of physical science both with lab), 2 years of a foreign language, and 1 year of visual or performing arts. I will need to send in my SAT or ACT scores. A GPA above 3.00 is also required. Tuition is not bad and they have financial aid.
	San Francisco, CA Urban Area	I love the location and have family in the area. They have a study abroad program. It is much more selective of a school, but it is also known for it's great education and history. They don't seem to have any set requirements for admissions other than excelling. If I want to get accepted I need to work hard in high school, take AP and Honors classes, join extra curricular activities, and push myself to work as hard as I can.
 UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE	The Old Schools, Trinity Lane, Cambridge CB2 1TN, United Kingdom	I want to go to either Cambridge or King's College for my postgraduate degree. I will need a Visa and a bachelor's degree with a GPA of at least 3.5. I plan on applying to this school as an adult.

London, England

I want to go here or Cambridge for graduate school. I want to become a teacher in England (Where I would like to live as an adult) and they have a teaching program. Once again, I will need a Visa

A variety of degree qualifications can be acceptable:

- Single or joint honours (with English as half)
- Academic theatre studies degrees (but candidates have to make up the gaps in subject knowledge during the course of the year)
- Communications, media or linguistic degrees, depending on what the degree entailed (in particular, any substantial amount of textual examination)
- A degree class of 2:1 is a required minimum. Those candidates whose first degree is not in English will need to demonstrate significant Literature subject knowledge within their application.

Paris, France

American University, but in a much more historical location. Definitely expensive, but they have scholarships and financial aid. Small class sizes. I would major in literary studies and the creative arts.

Overall Reflection -

I see a lot of studying, reading, writing, and hard work coming up for me in high school. I plan to spend a lot of time at the library. I want to finish up as much math and science in high school as I can so that I won't have to spend all that much time on it in university. It will definitely be tough, but I have chosen a path that I can see myself enjoying, and I already read and write a lot as is. I love learning grammar and can spend hours looking up common grammar mistakes and new vocabulary. I have always been naturally good at speaking, so teaching a class won't be too difficult. POLs will help me a lot because they are sort of like teaching. I have been sure to choose locations for school that will make learning even more fun (or places with opportunities for studying abroad in Japan) , and now that I know more of the logistics of international study I think I will have a much easier time when college comes. I will keep practicing my writing skills as I get older so that I can write a killer college essay, and I will join as many extra curricular activities as I can to ensure myself a spot in a university of my choice. I have already signed up for the MUN club for my freshmen year, and I will sign up for the Peace Leadership League as well. I am sure that any school will see that as a positive addition to my application. I will succeed at my goal for the future and I no longer feel as confused and worried for adulthood as I did before.
